

Art Gallery
of Western Australia

preview summer 09

Foreword

Since I commenced my tenure as the new Director in October, I have been wandering around our galleries with a sense of pride for the great work done by the staff and my predecessors. Like the many visitors enjoying our current exhibitions and the engaging Wonderlust permanent collection display, I find them a source of continuous wonderment and a learning and gratifying experience.

The superb accomplishments demonstrated by the Western Australian Indigenous Art Awards finalists can be viewed until 11 January. You can now vote online for your favourite artist. The People's Choice Award of $5,000 will be selected by online votes and a visitor ballot during the exhibition. Online voting is open to everyone, but I strongly encourage those who can to come into the Gallery to view the original artworks and vote in person.

During summer the exhibition program is varied and exciting. We are delighted to present the acclaimed Gordon Bennett, a National Gallery of Victoria Touring Exhibition. For the 2009 Perth International Arts Festival we are pleased to host Larrakitj. This exhibition is another of our successful collaborations with the Kerry Stokes Collection, a relationship which we hope to continue in future years. Larrakitj is shown alongside Yirrkala: Everywhen Bark Paintings from the State Art Collection. Everywhen is one of our regular Artist in focus exhibitions, and highlights the wealth and quality of the Gallery's Indigenous collection.

There is always great anticipation surrounding our annual, and extremely popular exhibition, Year 12 Perspectives, which celebrates the achievements of our young Western Australian artists. I am also looking forward to THING beware the material world. This exhibition will open visitors' eyes to an exciting new world where everyday objects, especially furniture, come to life as a splendid combination of functionality, innovative design, aesthetic quality and artistic substance.

Children, and probably also their parents, will have a blast during the school holidays when 60,000 white Lego pieces will be available for them to build whatever their fancy dictates. Don't miss this opportunity which takes place for only nine days, from 10–18 January. Session times will be available on our website, which we encourage you to visit regularly as we plan to add many new features in 2009.

I would particularly like to thank Wesfarmers Arts for being our Principal Partner and for sponsoring our Walk-in Tours, which I hope many of you will have the opportunity to enjoy. I would also like to extend my gratitude to all the Gallery's supporters – large and small. In my first two months here I have been overwhelmed by the warm welcome I have received from everyone I have met and I look forward to offering my contribution to this impressive and talented institution in the years to come. I invite you all to participate in all the exhibitions, public programs and events at your Gallery in 2009.

Western Australian Indigenous Art Awards 2008

Until 11 January 2009

There was a real buzz at the opening of the inaugural Western Australian Indigenous Art Awards on 31 October 2008. You could feel the level of excitement and anticipation rising within the audience as it waited for the Premier of Western Australia to announce the national winner of the $50,000 Western Australian Indigenous Art Award and winner of the $10,000 Western Australian Artist Award.

The Art Gallery of Western Australia and the awards selection panel commend each of the 16 finalists for the quality of their work and thank them for their outstanding contribution to the first awards exhibition. Congratulations particularly go to Western Australian artists Patrick Tjungurrayi – winner of the $50,000 major award, and June Walkutjukurr Richards – winner of the $10,000 WA artist award.

Tjungurrayi's paintings are remarkable for their originality, harmony, and lyricism, and for how they extend the dynamic Western Desert style in new directions. Richards' text and figurative paintings are also exceptional. Her works are refreshing, heartfelt, and direct in the way they deal with contemporary issues faced by Indigenous artists today.

Vote for your favourite artist in the $5,000 People's Choice Award. Votes can be cast at the Gallery or online until 4 January 2009 at: <http://www.artgallery.wa.gov.au/exhibitions/PeoplesChoiceAward.asp>

The winner of the People's Choice Award will be announced on 6 January 2009.

Gordon Bennett

Until 22 March 2009

A National Gallery of Victoria Touring Exhibition

Since his first major solo exhibition in 1989, Gordon Bennett has been critically acclaimed for the complex ways his work engages with historical and contemporary issues of cultural and personal identity in the context of Australia's colonial past and its postcolonial present. The exhibition will present twenty years of the artist's work from his early expressionist figurative paintings to his more recent engagement with abstraction.

Bennett is equally preoccupied with the visual language of words, signs and symbols as instruments of marginalisation. The State Art Collection's monumental Painting for a new republic (The inland sea) 1994, sums up the importance of the mirror motif in Bennett's practice as an emblem of a Eurocentric value system. In this work, the artist represents the opposing historical realities of the coloniser and colonised on the left and right side of his canvas, contrasting the activities of European explorers with the human cost of colonisation. The central mirror image links the two sides, alluding to a possible different perspective.

Yirrkala

Everywhen Bark Paintings from the State Art Collection

31 January – 31 May 2009

Everywhen, an Artist in focus exhibition, explores the richness and beauty of bark paintings from the Yirrkala region of North East Arnhem Land. This exhibition will survey selected works from the State Art Collection, including many that were acquired by collector Louis Allen between the late 1900s and 1970s.

It is difficult to define Indigenous relationships to the land, systems of belief, law and tradition ceremony in a way that easily transfers into the English language or a Western understanding. In 1968, anthropologist and theorist W.E.H. Stanner described what is commonly known as the 'Dreaming' using the term 'everywhen'. 'Everywhen' describes something that is somewhat timeless, not fixed in the past but part of the present and the future, all at the same time.

Works in this exhibition illustrate contemporary issues, clan titles to land and identity, Creation Beings and the formation of the physical and the metaphysical. As the term 'everywhen' describes a state of always, these works are timeless contemporaneous pieces of art in their own right, imbued with immense cultural wealth and aesthetic value as fine art.

This exhibition and the accompanying publication signal the culmination of the inaugural three-year Indigenous Curatorial Internship for Chad Creighton, who has completed a post-graduate Diploma in Applied Heritage Studies at Curtin alongside three years of technical on the job training in museology at the Gallery. Chad's internship was supported by AngloGold Ashanti Australia Pty Ltd, Carey Mining Pty Ltd, Downer EDI Pty Ltd and Curtin University of Technology. The partnership has been recognised twice, with a 2006 Western Australian Business and the Arts Partnership Award and a 2008 state Australian Business Arts Foundation award.

Larrakitj

Kerry Stokes Collection

13 February – 31 May 2009

Since 2000, a forest of Larrakitj has been gradually taking shape in Perth. Now the public has the opportunity to see this unique collection of Larrakitj for the first time in this free exhibition at the Art Gallery of Western Australia. The Larrakitj collection displays work by Yolngu artists from North East Arnhem Land.

Larrakitj are sculptures that originate as trees in stringybark forests. Hollowed out by termites, trees selected for Larrakitj are usually harvested after the dry season fires. A cultural cycle then begins as the trunks are smoothed and shaped until the surface is ready to be painted in ochres. Each Larrakitj, with its clan-specific imagery, is an imposing presence.

Covered in iconic imagery of sea and land, saltwater and freshwater, each Larrakitj presents a deeply layered experience of people, places and clans from Blue Mud Bay to Arnhem Bay.

The past decade has been revolutionary for Larrakitj, which are now among the most powerful aesthetic objects in contemporary Australian art. Their realm of importance now reaches beyond their deep cultural use as receptacles in traditional funeral rituals or their role as metaphor and symbol in the Yolngu conceptual universe.

On display are works by men and women from two generations. The exhibition contains and promotes an energising conversation about the public and personal, the past and the present, about tradition and innovation.

The artists in this exhibition are represented by Buku-Larrnggay Mulka, a Yolngu-owned arts centre and cultural hub of Yirrkala, an Indigenous township on the western side of the Gulf of Carpentaria.

Larrakitj: The Kerry Stokes Collection is curated by Anne Brody, Associate Curator of the Kerry Stokes Collection. Larrakitj is presented by the Art Gallery of Western Australia and Australian Capital Equity and is a feature exhibition of the 2009 Perth International Arts Festival.

Year 12 Perspectives 2008

Opens 8 April 2009

The selection process has been finalised for Year 12 Perspectives 2008, and once again we have been struck by the diversity, dynamism and creativity of young artists in this state. Year 12 Perspectives has become a much-loved fixture on the Art Gallery's annual calendar and is a showcase and forum for emerging talent to connect with the wider public and explore a range of subjects and themes important to young people today.

This year 56 works have been selected from across Western Australia, and in a continuing commitment to cross-cultural engagement, 17 works from young artists in Japan will also be featured in the exhibition, through the generous support of the International Foundation for Arts and Culture. The Art Gallery of Western Australia is sure that this year's Year 12 Perspectives will continue to inspire, amaze and delight visitors.

Paintings conservation

There are many layers which make up a painting, each consisting of materials which behave and age differently. Understanding how these layers interact is the business of Maria Kubik, the Art Gallery's paintings conservator.

To help Maria better assess the needs of the Collection, the Gallery has recently acquired a polarised light microscope and infrared reflection system. The information this provides helps decide what form of conservation is required. Treatment may be as simple as fitting preventive glazing, or more extensive, such as retouching losses or structural repairs. One of the most rewarding treatments is removing a deteriorated varnish layer, which leads to a visible improvement in a painting's appearance. Several examples of recently cleaned paintings are on display in the current Wonderlust exhibition.

For a more detailed description of the varnish removal of Daubigny's Snow scene, Valmondois, 1875 see the new conservation web page at: www.artgallery.wa.gov.au/collections/Conservation.asp
